The parable of the king giving a wedding feast challenges us to look at our relationship with God. The guest who didn't respond to the king's invitation didn't give the king the respect that was his due. God says that he should be number one in our lives. Unfortunately for some people God becomes no more important than other activities. As the Gospel speaks, "Some ignored the invitation and went away, one to his farm, another to his business." They didn't set their hearts against the king but rather didn't respond as they should have. How often might we put other activities on an equal basis as our relationships with God. May the love of God always remain number one in our lives. ~Fr. Greg
